Proposition 65: Illini is thoroughly educated not only on the regulatory standards but also on the challenges that Proposition 65 poses to consumers. The extensive and ever-growing list of chemicals recognized by the State of California to cause harm are routinely monitored. Illini evaluates every item based on its material composition for potential Prop 65 concerns. Research on the item's material composition, laboratory recommendation, and past cases involving that material determine which chemicals to test for.

Prop 65 Testing Frequency: For the existing line, items are evaluated for compliance upon reorder/biennially barring any material changes made to the item within this time frame. For new items, this is included in the initial product development process.

Prop 65 Labeling: Illini is in the process of transitioning the line to products free of Prop 65 Chemicals. As this transition is ongoing, a select few items may require labeling in the interim as a precaution. These labels are applied to each product, regardless of shipment destination. This labeled stock is exempt from new labeling regulations as the update does not apply to inventory existing before the August 30th, 2018 effective date. We understand that a customer may prefer to label an item as a precaution regardless of Illini's evaluation of the product. In situations like this, Prop 65 labels may be applied to any item not already featuring a warning label for an additional labeling fee. For a complete and updated list of interim labeled items, visit the General Info tab of our website, or contact Illini Compliance. For a select few items, there are not alternative Prop 65 compliant materials available. In cases such as this, the item is labeled until an alternative material becomes available for use. Polycarbonate plastics, like those found in the lenses and frames of reading and sunglasses, are known by nature to contain BPA as a product of the manufacturing process. With this information and 3rd party guidance, Illini has made the decision to begin labeling all styles of reading glasses and sunglasses for Proposition 65 received from this point forward. Separate from our existing list of labeled items, these reading and sunglasses are subject to online and catalog warnings per the August 2018 Prop 65 labeling update. As these items transition to labeled stock, online warnings will be added to web platforms on a per-item basis as labeled stock is received into inventory. Please note that certain colors and styles will transition to labeled stock before others, but the item as a whole will be labeled on our online platforms. Please contact Illini Compliance with questions about this decision and transition.

CPSIA: Illini maintains compliance with rules and regulations set forth by the CPSIA and follows CPSC protocol to determine if an item is a children's product. Illini also considers the potential for childlike appeal, number of parts, and any other factors which may lead to the child receiving the product. If the current or potential item is considered a toy, child's product, or childcare article, the item is tested by an accredited third-party lab for CPSIA compliance. Permanent and distinguishing marks, known as a tracking number, are placed on regulated items marketed to children 12 and under. Children's Product Certificates are available for regulated items and can be furnished upon request or found on the Illini website.

CPSIA Testing Frequency: CPSIA testing is conducted every 12 months if the stock is rotated frequently, and the materials do not change. If a material change occurs within this time frame, then third party testing is performed. If inventory life exceeds 12 months, Illini conducts third-party testing upon the next inventory purchase order. We pride ourselves on providing our customers with the peace of mind to confidently carry our products. To aid this confidence, testing information can be obtained from the product's GCC's on the Illini website, or from test reports furnished by the Illini Compliance Team. Should you require more information, or have additional questions, please contact Illini Product compliance at product.compliance@illiniline.com
